

56 ARE TAKEN IN GAMBLING RAID; ONE IS A WOMAN

Police Rush by Lookouts, but Find No Paraphernalia
in Place.

A woman and fifty-five men were arrested in a raid on an alleged gambling house in 33th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, by four detectives at 5:30 A. M. to-day. The police had set the trap for a gambler, well known in the Tenderloin, who was reported to be running the place wide open. He was not in the batch of prisoners.

The four-story building had been vacant until recently. The police were told it was protected by an elaborate array of lookouts on roofs and corners. Detectives Ford and Mehan of Inspector Boettler's staff dashed by the lookouts and, with two plainclothes policemen, were in the house before the alleged gamblers knew it.

When the policemen were discovered, someone switched on the lights. The books and other paraphernalia, to keep undesirable out were just as effective in keeping the gamblers in, as not one got away.

There were several hand-to-hand fights, and many windows and glass door panels were broken, the commotion arousing the neighborhood, but in the end the detectives were victorious. They found no paraphernalia, the games being apparently conducted on cheap tables. The house was practically unfurnished. The prisoners were taken away in six patrol wagons. The woman alleged to have been in charge described herself as Louise Dillmeier, thirty-five, of No. 1 Hancock Street, Brooklyn. The men were booked for disorderly conduct.

RAISED RENTALS SEEN AS MOTIVE IN LANDLORD'S DEATH

Police Seek Negroes After Mysterious Murder in Harlem Tenement.

Without any evidence that a hold-up was intended the police working on the murder of Hyman Manoson, in the hallway of his home, No. 115 West 137th Street, are to-day almost convinced the killing was due to a desire for revenge.

Manoson, sixty years old, was killed shortly after nine o'clock last night. With his wife he lived in the ground floor of the tenement which he owned, in the heart of the Harlem Black Belt. He owned a half dozen tenements in the same district.

With Herman Efron, a painter, who also acted as a sort of body-guard for him on occasions, Manoson was out collecting rents last evening. He had had trouble over increasing rents in one of the houses the police say, but which one has not been told.

The two men returned to Manoson's house. The aged owner entered the hall first. When they reached the door of Manoson's room a tall negro, very black and about twenty-one years old, without uttering a word, shot Manoson. The bullet hit him in the heart, killing him instantly.

The murderer made no attempt to get any money and with a negro who had followed the two white men into the house rushed out the front door. The two negroes ran toward 7th Avenue, made through a vacant lot to 137th Street and escaped. The shot and Efron's yell for police brought a crowd in a minute.

When the police arrived Manoson's body was as it had fallen. There was a crowd in the hall and some of the early comers had turned a pocket out and abstracted $107 which Efron says was in it. About $500 distributed through several pockets was untouched.

Efron is positive no word was spoken and no attempt was made to profit by the killing. He gave a description of the negro who fired the shot and the other one who had followed them into the hallway.

Five weeks ago the Manoson flat was robbed of $13 in cash, a stick pin and a revolver. Manoson had a permit to carry a revolver and one was found on the body.

Hold-ups of collectors have been frequent in the district and it was at first thought this was another one.

Real "Whitley" Arrests Bogus One.

Detective Percy Cassidy of the Chief Inspector's staff and known as "Whitley from Headquarters," early to-day arrested a man who, it is alleged, has been posing as "Whitley from Headquarters." At the West 39th Street Station the prisoner said he was John Goetz, twenty-four, of No. 142 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, a machinist.
